The first letter in the word 'diet' usually represents the main benefit of the product, the second letter refers to a speciality, like vegan or organic. The last letter refers to the origin of the product. So let's have a look at all these letters one by one. For convenience I have also included the nutritional value of the meat/plant food alternatives in case you want to keep track of your daily calorie intake. If a product contains more than one meat product, we'll refer to the product with the best health benefit as the meat substitute. So when looking for a meat alternative, let's start with the F for fruit. Fruits Most plant-based products are made from fruit, because fruit contains significant amounts of fibre and a decent amount of micronutrients. Vegetables If you really have your heart set on a vegetable alternative, the best option is probably to look at the colour. The top rows are from vegetables, and the bottom rows are from mushrooms. The best vegetable alternative for you depends on your personal preference. If you prefer the taste of a well-cooked vegetable, then go for the top row. If you like vegetables with a bitter taste, then go with the bottom row. More fruit and vegetables
