A: You can try that with `sed -n '/^$/!/^/p' input | sed -e '\^(^\\|\\)./{N;p}' -e 'x' -e 's/^(.)\\(\\.)$/\1\2/p'`
-n - turn on only one line -p - print only matching line /^$/ - match line that starts with nothing /^/ - match only a line that starts with.. p - print only matching line with `sed \^(^\\|\\).*/` - match either of ^ or. {N;p} - repeat the last command, except print only the current line -e 'x' - match a single character -e 's/^(.*)\\(\\.)$/\1\2/p' - replace a line that starts with both ^ and. by only. and ^ and print that line See: Inter-individual and intra-individual variations in the pharmacokinetics of the triazine herbicide S-metolachlor and its metabolites in rat. We investigated the inter-individual and intra-individual variation in the pharmacokinetics of S-metolachlor, the major metabolite o-p' quinomethylenebis-S-metolachlor (O-PQM) and the deethyl metabolite (O-PQMdE) in 6 rats by measuring the concentrations in plasma for 1 week after a single oral dose of 50 mg kg(-1). The results showed that the inter-individual variation in the pharmacokinetics of the triazine weedicide was low, however, there was a high variation in the pharmacokinetics of the metabolite O-PQMdE, indicating that the metabolite O-PQMdE undergoes extensive biotransformation. The main elimination route of the triazine herbicide and its metabolite is liver metabolism, but in the case of the deethyl metabolite, there are many routes of elimination and its main route of elimination is from kidney. The deethylation of S-metolachlor is a detoxication pathway, and it is reduced when S-metolachlor is administered with foods, and the bioavailability of S-metolachlor is c6a93da74d
