First lady Melania Trump privately blamed Black Americans for lacking initiative: report The Hill's 12:30 Report: Ginsburg lies in repose Melania Trump: Ginsburg's spirit will live on in all she has inspired' MORE on Saturday said the death of a police officer in New York City was "heartbreaking," adding that she was a "big supporter" of law enforcement. The president and first lady were in Louisiana on Saturday for a fundraiser for hurricane relief efforts. "It's heartbreaking," Trump told the crowd. "But we're also very grateful that he was a great police officer." "We support them. We support them," she continued. "We don't always agree, but when an officer is under attack, they will always act with honor and with dignity," she said. ADVERTISEMENT The first lady praised the officer as a "saint." "If a police officer would like to be a martyr, I'll be right beside them, but that's not what they signed up for," she said to applause. "I'll be right there." She also used the occasion to address the issue of race relations. The first lady said the "divisive rhetoric" in the country needed to stop and expressed her support for the #MeToo movement. Trump last week said in an interview on Fox News that she thinks the country is now "more divided than ever." "I don't think our country is as divided as some of the voices saying on TV, on Twitter, and on the media, and that's a dangerous thing," she said in the interview. James Erwin (Christian revivalist) James Erwin (born December 16, 1816 in Alexandria, Virginia; died August 14, 1888 in Watertown, New York) was an American Christian minister. He is most recognized for his preaching of revivalism and for being an evangelist. Early life Erwin was the fifth child of William and Sarah M. Erwin. His father was a homemaker with also a number of small businesses, and his mother was a teacher. His parents raised him in a Christian home, and his father encouraged him in his studies. He attended the University of Virginia as an undergraduate. He was a founding student of Lexington Theological Seminary, now Lynchburg College. He received his Bachelor of Arts degree from the sem
